

BEER & GASOLINE DON'T MIX!

Tell your legislator

Current Pennsylvania law prohibits the sale of beer where gasoline is sold. Considering the issue of drunk driving, it's one law that makes good sense. Some people think Pennsylvania should change the law in the name of convenience.

With more than 12,000 taverns, restaurants and distributors licensed to sell take-out beer in our state, Pennsylvania's already got the market cornered on convenience—more beer outlets than drug stores, gas stations and supermarkets combined.

Call, write or email your state legislator. Ask at the checkout counter and they will even give you a post card to record your opinion and then address it and mail it for you.

Malt Beverage Distributors
Association of Pennsylvania

www.mbdapa.org