

ONE SUPERMARKET ITEM WE DON'T NEED

NO BEER IN SUPERMARKETS Send the right message to our kids

Kids learn from watching their parents and other adults. So what kind of example will it set for children if we allow beer to be sold off the same shelves in supermarkets as cereal, vegetables and fruit? All in the name of convenience?

Truth be told, Pennsylvania has more restaurants, bars and distributors licensed to sell take-out beer than it has gas stations, drug stores and supermarkets combined. That sounds like convenient access already.

Take a moment to tell your legislator that you believe that more than 12,000 places to buy take-out beer in Pennsylvania is enough and tell them to say "no" to beer sales in supermarkets where we'll send a message to kids that beer is just another beverage.

Ask at the checkout counter. They'll give you a post card to write a message to your legislator. And, they'll even mail it for you.

Malt Beverage Distributors
Association of Pennsylvania

www.mbdapa.org